
Canadian Crime Statistics

Selected Time Trends and Interprovincial Comparisons

Please note: Crime statistics do not necessarily give an accurate description of the actual number of crimes. Some of the crime statistics depend on the willingness of victims to report a crime (as in the case of certain types of assaults, or property crimes), or they may depend on the ability of law enforcement agencies to detect certain crimes (for example, prostitution and drug-related offences). As a consequence, increases and decreases in crime rates over time may not be the result of an actual increase and decrease in the number of crimes, but may result from changes in victims' attitudes towards reporting crimes or changes in funding, training, and political direction of law enforcement agencies. Users of the figures and tables contained in this document are advised to interpret the numbers with great caution. No opportune conclusions should be drawn from these numbers without more careful scrutiny of the determining factors of the changes over time. Likewise, the interprovincial comparisons may suffer from different law enforcement regimes under provincial or municipal jurisdiction, and may also reflect disparate attitudes towards reporting of crimes in different provinces.
